ARMY DIRIGIBLE C-2 BURNS WHILE ON CROSS-CONTINENT TRIP

Was About to Make Exhibition Flight With Newspaper Men and Army Officers Aboard at San Antonio When Flames Destroyed It—None Seriously Hurt.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 17.—One man was seriously injured and four others suffered minor injuries this morning when fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the giant army dirigible C-2 a few minutes before a scheduled exhibition flight over San Antonio.

Sergeant A. L. Albright, member of the crew of the C-2 was seriously injured when he jumped from the rigging of the ship to avoid the flames which enveloped it.

Those who sustained minor injuries, chiefly from burns, were Captain N. M. Walker, aide to General Hines, commander of the Eighth Corps Area, S. Dean Wasson, newspaper man, Major Strauss, commander of the C-2 and Manuel Cardenas, newspaper man.

Fifteen minutes after the report that the C-2 had been completely destroyed, an ambulance was called to another part of San Antonio, when an airplane fell several hundred feet and crashed in a field.

The dirigible, which arrived here Sunday on its transcontinental flight from California to its home hangar at Langley field, Va., contained army officers and newspaper men preparatory to an exhibition flight over San Antonio when the blaze flashed over it, and completely enveloped the huge ship.

Narrow escapes from death were numerous as a crowd of more than 500 persons were near the bag when the flames enveloped it. As the tongues of flames licked around the huge bag a near panic almost resulted among those crowding the field from which the airship was preparing to rise. The excitement, however, was soon quieted when it was found that no one had been killed. Major Strauss, commander of the C-2 and Lieutenant O. A. Anderson of the crew, were the only ones except newspaper men actually in the car of the ship when the fire started. All the others were on the ground near it.

The big machine quickly burned and is a mass of wreckage.

An investigation to determine the cause of the fire will be started immediately. It was announced immediately after the fire.

Lecture Postponed.
Dr. Cady's lecture on the Mediterranean Cruise has been postponed to Monday evening, October 30.

SEVERAL CASES IN POLICE COURT

Dora Orkoff Calms Ignatz Swantz Knocked Her Down—One Taxi Driver Accuses Another of Assault—Other Matters Before Judge Schrick.

Ignatz Swantz of Murray street was arrested this morning by Sergeant Hanley on a warrant obtained by Dora Orkoff, who has a store on Chambers street. She claims that last week Ignatz entered the store and struck her, knocking her down. Ignatz claims she is mistaken and that he did not hit her. The hearing was adjourned until next Tuesday so that both sides could have their witnesses ready. Bail was fixed at $50 cash or $100 bail bond.

The case of F. A. Tigar, arrested on complaint of Max Mones of Ann street, another taxi driver, charging Tigar with assaulting him, was also adjourned until Wednesday. Tigar entered a plea of not guilty.

The trial of Fred Mower, the young negro lad, was adjourned to next Monday as his attorney, Judge W. D. Dunner, Jr., is busy in supreme court.

Ebenezer Lounsbury of Stone Ridge arrested for public intoxication, was given another chance. Frank Krauss arrested on the same charge this morning was too drunk to be arraigned and will have a hearing Wednesday.

Republican Candidates Present Issues at Crowded Opera House

Senator Wadsworth, Colonel Donovan, Miss Rhodes and Congressman Ward Analyze Records of Congress and State Administration Showing How Acknowledged Economy Has Accompanied Increased Efficiency—Practical Methods Replace Inability, Sentimentality and "You Know Me, Al" Job Holders.

An audience that filled the Kingston opera house to its capacity Monday night listened with closest attention, and frequently interrupted to applaud, while campaign issues, both national and state, were ably discussed by United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Col. William J. Donovan, Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, Miss Anne Rhodes of New York city and Congressman Charles B. Ward.

The audience was one of the most responsive which has attended a political mass meeting in Kingston in many years, and the clear, fair and impartial manner in which all the speakers freely discussed the various important questions which are to be determined on election day made a deep impression on everyone.

The meeting was presided over by Denmark, frozen meats from Australia and the Argentine, wool from everywhere, and prices of these and other farm products were on a rapid decline.

Agricultural Legislation.
Within ten days after Congress met, the House of Representatives reported an emergency agricultural bill. Within two more days it had passed the house, and in a little more than a month it was a law. It checked the downward trend of prices and gradually, as the surplus of imported stocks was exhausted, there came the upward trend. Wool soon reached a fairly remunerative level and, with the return of normal and favorable conditions, bound to follow the settlement of the coal and rail strikes, there is every prospect of satisfactory prices for all agricultural products.

Your Taxes Reduced.
This Congress has passed laws

$500, and the exemption for dependents is increased from $200 to $400 for each child or dependent. This item alone saves to those of moderate incomes approximately $100,000,000 a year. Over 90 per cent of those making income-tax returns have an income of $5,000 a year or less, so this item on the tax-reduction program reaches many people.

Under The Budget System.
"I want to assure you that the Congress is the economic branch of our national government. The departments are ambitious to serve and to build up their respective establishments. They are constantly seeking, with commendable zeal, perhaps, development and new avenues for service with the necessary increases of personnel and appropriations.

"A large class of people, a very large class, seems to assume that if the government does or builds it or pays for it, that it costs no man anything. They seem to think that government money grows on bushes, to be gathered at will, or is provided by the good Lord in the shape of manna from Heaven.

"But it does not and it is not. Every dollar the government spends must be collected from you and the people of the country by direct taxation.

"While many departments and many people urge greater governmental activities and greater appropriations, they are at the same time urging retrenchment, economy and lower taxes.

"You cannot increase appropriations and reduce taxes. They go together up or down.

"So the Congress must stand between them, must save the people from themselves, must use rare discrimination between demands, but must curtail expenditures if taxes are to be reduced and the public debt paid.

"Along this line the Republican Congress for the last four years has directed its first attention. The Appropriation Committee is hard boiled. It plays no favorites. It must be shown it scrutinizes the budget estimates closely; calls in those interested in specific appropriations and hears what they have to say, considers the needs of the department and of the country; rarely increases a budget estimate for any enterprise but very often reduces them.

"Before the budget system was adopted, appropriations were reported out through eight different committees in the House of Representatives. This gave members a chance to help frame appropriation bills. But with the adoption of the budget system the House patriotically and unselfishly gave all power of reporting appropriation bills over to the one big Committee on Appropriations. This took from the individual members of the several appropriating committees some power and influence. It will make it harder for individual members to get through special appropriations for local benefits. It sends all bills appropriating money to the one big committee which considers the nation's needs for its many departments and enterprises as a whole.

"Handling the appropriations through the budget system in the house has its disadvantages as well as its advantages. These disadvantages will be felt locally by Congressmen who find it harder to get through appropriations for local benefits back home. The advantages will be felt nationally and will undoubtedly be reflected in reduced appropriations and lower taxes.

"The adoption of the budget system for which the people have been clamoring for forty years is one of the biggest achievements of this Congress.

Veterans Bureau Act.

"The act establishing a Veterans Bureau and consolidating all of the agencies charged with the care and responsibility of the ex-service men was the fulfillment of a national obligation to provide an organization which, so far as it was possible to do so, should cure the delays which had been complained of in meeting our obligations to our national defenders. The bureau is now functioning with increasing efficiency and notwithstanding the enormous burden placed upon it, looking after the welfare of the more than 300,000 men who are under its care or have applied for benefits, is continually reducing the cases and the causes of complaint among those whom it serves. The bureau will this calendar year pay to the veterans of the World War and expend for their benefit the stupendous sum of approximately $425,000,000.

Continuing its policy of making every needed provision for the care and comfort of the sick and disabled veterans of the World War, Congress passed the act of April 20, 1922, which authorized appropriations in the sum of $17,000,000 in aiding the director of the Veterans Bureau to provide for the construction of additional facilities and to furnish medical, surgical and hospital services and supplies for persons who served in the World War, Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the Boxer rebellion. These funds are in addition to the $38,000,000 provided for similar purposes near the close of the Sixty-sixth Congress, and it is believed that with the sums now made available, abundant hospital facilities will be provided for all of the veterans who may seek them.

Foreign Debt Refunding Act.

"This Congress has had the very important question before it of providing for a commission to treat with our foreign debtors and to arrange with them as to the terms of payment of the principal and interest of the foreign debt, amounting to more than eleven billion, which they owe us.

"It became necessary to legislate a

CONGRESSMAN CHARLES B. WARD.

County Chairman Philip • Elting, who introduced the speakers.

What Congress Has Done.
Congressman Charles B. Ward, the first speaker, received an ovation when he was introduced by County Chairman Elting, and said in part:

"I am glad to be with you again, for I always feel at home in Kingston and with a Kingston audience, but I feel it my duty to spend the time allotted to me to tell you of some of the more important work which has been done by the present Congress of the United States.

"The sixty-seventh Congress was called by President Harding in special session on April 11, 1921, charged by President Harding with the duty of lifting the tax burdens, revising the tariff, restoring peace and enacting legislation toward the restoration of normal conditions.

"This Congress has up to this time placed upon the statute books 545 separate laws, of which 405 are public and 140 are private, including claims.

Lifting the Burden.
The multiplied ills of the period of deflation, acute everywhere, fell most heavily upon the farmer and the stockman, and to his relief the administration and the new Congress turned—before it took up the great tasks of general tax and tariff legislation of the budget and general restoration.

"All the world beyond our borders was in acute distress, or threatened with bankruptcy and financial collapse. Ours was the only treasure chest in the world from which real money could be secured in exchange for commodities; and so there came to us from the ends of the earth, pouring through every custom house, eggs from China, butter from greatly reducing your Federal taxes. The reduction this year to the taxpayers will amount to upward of $818,000,000—nearly a billion dollars.

"The 'nuisance taxes,' those little items you used to have to pay on soda water, ice cream, candy, perfumery and cosmetics, tooth paste, millinery umbrellas, parasols, stockings, shoes, wearing apparel, and a hundred other necessities of everyday life have been abolished. You do not pay them any more, and you have saved about $72,000,000. The tax on musical instruments has been reduced. The tax on some admission fees has been abolished, and the tax on sporting goods—the tax the kiddies used to pay on footballs, baseballs, fishing tackle, etc.—was removed, saving you and them the tidy sum of $35,000,000 a year. The biggest saving of all comes in the tax removed from freight, express and parcel post bills. This amounts to about $365,000,000 a year. This tax was unquestionably paid by the ultimate consumer; and its removal certainly reduces the cost of living to the full amount. Another big item is the $31,000,000, the people paid on their passenger and Pullman fares which has also been abolished.

"Taxes on premiums for life, accident, health, fire and other insurances, amounting to $20,000,000 are removed.

"Stockholders in building and loan associations have the first $300 profit each year, exempt from income tax, which of course is chiefly of benefit to the working and salaried people.

"The income tax is made more favorable for those of moderate incomes. The head of a family with an income of $5,000 a year or less gets an additional exemption of grant of authority for the handling of this tremendously important matter, involving not only the vast sum of more than eleven billion, but affecting our relations with Armenia, Austria, Belgium, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland, France, Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Liberia, Lithuania, Poland, Rumania, Russia and Serbia, all of whom owe us sums ranging from a few thousand dollars to hundreds of millions of dollars.

Coal Profitmaking Act.

For some months past the nation has been passing through a trying situation growing out of the difficulties and differences attending wage adjustments in the coal mining industry peace reigns again and we are rapidly approaching a normal output. Unfortunately there are those who would take advantage of the people's needs in the conditions growing out of the long period of non-production, and the nation is confronted with the menace of conscienceless profiteering in the sale of coal.

"In this condition of affairs the president appealed for legislation to prevent, as far as it was possible for the federal government to do so, the plundering of the people in this hour of coal shortage. The Congress has promptly responded and placed upon the statute books legislation which it is believed will go far toward preventing the exorbitant prices for coal which have been threatened.

Additional U. S. District Judges.

The legislation as enacted provides for 24 additional district judges. The appointment of these new judges, and the provision for the assignment and transfer of judges will, it is believed, greatly relieve the present congested conditions of the court dockets of the country.

Federal Highway Act.

"This act made an appropriation of $75,000,000 for federal aid in road building for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, and $5,000,000 for forest roads and trails for the same fiscal year, and $10,000,000 for the

WHY ROTARY CLUB IS BRINGING MARINE BAND

The chief purpose of the Rotary Club is arranging for concerts by the U. S. Marine Band in Kingston on October 29 is educational and entertaining—to give Kingston people an opportunity to hear the greatest band in America. A secondary motive is to add to the club's fund for work among boys and care of crippled children. Heretofore the club members have financed this work by personal contributions, but more work can be done if there is more money. The Marine Band offers the greatest music of every part of the world and of all periods of our civilization. Beethoven contributes the splendor of supreme musical genius; Von Weber the spirit of romance; Schubert and Tchaikowski the spirit of patriotic fervor; Wagner the lofty dramatic sense; Puccini the modern inspiration; La-come the lightness of French gallantry; and Johann Strauss the enrapturing sentiment of the Viennese waltz. The ballet is not forgotten, the selection from his works this time being the dance interlude from Coppelia instead of the pizzicato from Silvia so popularly linked with the name of Delibes. The opulent magnificence of Russia's musical imagination is displayed in Rimsky-Korsakov's "Hymn to the Sun" and in Rachmaninov's Prelude in C Minor—the first a revelation of descriptive composition; the second a supreme demonstration of absolute music—music for music's own sake.

Of the American compositions on the program, the Star Spangled Banner, which constitutes the finale of every Marine Band concert, stands forth as the greatest. It was written by Francis Scott Key to the melody of "Anacraon in Heaven," which tradition credits vaguely to a composer named Smith who wrote in 1778. It has been said that no one has heard the poem in its full effectiveness, except as recited by Charles B. Hanford. It has been declared with no less positiveness that no one has heard the music rendered in its full beauty unless he has heard it from the U. S. Marine Band.

MILTON.

Milton, Oct. 16.—A ferry service between Milton and Rudco on the east side of the Hudson river will be started next spring. Plans for the building of the ferry slips on both sides of the river have been completed. Parties from New York are behind the project. A ferry between Milton and the east side of the river has been needed for several years. With a good ferry service our residents who do their shopping in Poughkeepsie can take the trolley cars from the east side of the river on the Poughkeepsie and Wappingers State road which will bring them to the uptown section of the city and save the long walk or trolley car journey from the Poughkeepsie ferry. It is about a mile from the Delepenha factory or Rudco to the Poughkeepsie and Wappingers State road. The landing on the Milton side connects with the Newburgh and Highland state road. A concrete road connects the Milton landing with the state road in this village.

Harvest Home and Rally Day services were held last Sunday morning and evening at the Methodist Church. At the evening service, by special request, the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau, the Rev. J. Leadbeater, gave an interesting address in regard to the observance of Better Home Week.

Mrs. Gerow was a former resident of Milton, being the last surviving member of the family of the late John Young, grandfather of Edward Young, our present supervisor of this town.

Prof. D. M. Warren of the Union Free School attended the meeting of the Schoolmasters' Council at the Palatine Hotel at Newburgh last week.

Several of our residents attended the Methodist Conference at Newburgh last week.

Miss Vera Bowden of New York city was a recent guest of Mrs. Edward Nolan.

Miss Florence Evans of Rhyl, North Wales, has been a recent guest of her cousin, Mrs. Edward Young.

Miss Grace Hallock of New York has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hallock.

EXAMINATIONS FOR VOTERS' LITERACY

A recent amendment to the New York State Constitution and subsequent legislation require all new voters to be able to read and write English before being eligible to vote. In brief the revised election law provides:

First, that local election officials at time of registration (or in communities where personal registration is not required, at time of election) shall require all new voters to read intelligibly an excerpt of approximately fifty words from the state constitution and write legibly in English ten words from the passage read.

Second, that the local election officials may accept a certificate of literacy issued by the local school authorities under regulations adopted by the Board of Regents.

Examinations for this certificate of literacy will be held between the hours of one and two p. m. on October 18, October 25, and November 1, 1922, in the following schools:

District 3, Olive, Shokan.
District 8, Olive, West Shokan.
District 1, Olive, Krumville.
District 10, Shandaken, Pine Hill.
District 4, Shandaken, Big Indian.
District 2, Shandaken, Shandaken.
District 6, Shandaken, Phoenixia.
District 4, Woodstock, Wattenberg.
District 5, Woodstock, Lake Hill.
District 2, Woodstock, Woodstock.

Examinations will be held in the town of Hardenbergh as follows:

District No. 2, Mapledale, October 18 and October 25.

District No. 8, Turnwood, October 18 and October 25.

In both schools in the town of Hardenbergh the examinations will begin at 1 o'clock p. m.

This provides a place for this examination in each election district in four towns mentioned above.

PINE HILL.

Pine Hill, Oct. 16.—Clifford Champion of Stamford, was at Pine Hill one day last week and purchased the "Sentinel" printing plant of F. D. Cure, and moved it to Stamford.

C. O. Billings has sold the tract of land and five bungalows on the east side of Maple avenue to Patrick McGuinn of Brooklyn. We understand that Mr. McGuinn contemplates making some radical improvements to the property.

Morton Bertrand and family of Oneonta spent a couple of days in town last week, guests of Mrs. Bertrand's mother, Mrs. Effie Bertrand. Plumbers are at work putting running water in all of the sleeping rooms in The Winterton.

Workmen are engaged tearing down a portion of the old Wellington Hotel at the head of Main street, which had been an eyesore for the past two years, and the owners of the property will commence rebuilding the place at once so as to have it ready for occupancy next season.

The Sunday School scholars and teachers of the Presbyterian Church enjoyed an automobile ride and picnic last Saturday.

Steve H. O'Connor motored up from New York last Saturday and spent the week-end with his family. Potatoes are selling in this village at 90 cents per bushel.

Charles Persons is building a new bungalow on the lot he recently purchased of Louise Persons.

Miss Marjorie Eignor, deputy postmistress, spent a couple of days in Kingston last week.

A. Wacker is building a bungalow on his lot on lower Main street.

A frame house belonging to Jacob Blish in Townsend Hollow, about three miles from this village, caught fire from a defective chimney last Friday night and burned to the ground. Only a small portion of the contents were saved.

Wurts Street Baptist Church.

An entertainment will be held in the chapel of the Wurts Street Baptist Church tonight under the auspices of the Sunday school. A most interesting and out of the ordinary program has been arranged. A novel surprise is promised all who attend.

A Psychologist.

When Miller received an autograph copy of his friend Lewis' latest book on the "Genetic Theory of Knowledge" he immediately sat him down and acknowledged the gift, saying that he "anticipated great pleasure in its perusal."

"Why didn't you read it first?" asked Mrs. Miller. "Then you could have said something much nicer than that." "Margaret," said the husband as he gave Lewis' book a conspicuous place on the library table. "I have a feeling that this is one of the times when my forethought would be better than my hindthought."

Owl's Need of Silence.

A good deal has been written, says Professor Batten in Chambers Journal, about the feathers of the owl, which enable him to fly with such muffled flight that he can surprise his quarry lurking in the grass. It has often occurred to me, however, that the silence of the owl's flight may be to enable the bird itself to hear, rather than to prevent others from hearing.

In his hunting, the owl is dependent upon the minute sounds for guidance, and anyone who has ever flown will realize that it would be impossible to hear anything at all in the air unless flight were as noiseless as it is capable of being.

Never Mind the Engagement.

"You let that young man kiss you, and yet you're not engaged?"

"I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself."

"Not at all. What's the use of becoming engaged to a young man you're only going to see for two weeks during the summer?"—Detroit Free Press.

Hearts Entombed in Jerusalem.
The heart of the hero King Charlemagne is carefully preserved in the Cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle. The late Marquis of Bute had his heart conveyed by sea, in the custody of his eldest and favorite daughter, from Scotland to the Mount of Olives, at Jerusalem, for entombment. The heart of King Robert Bruce—Scotland's national hero—after the strangest vicissitudes in connection with a vain attempt of his knight, Black Douglas, to convey it to the Holy Land, in fulfillment of a vow made by that monarch, to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, was brought back from Spain, and lies buried in the now ruined abbey of Melrose, the "Kennequah" of Sir Walter Scott's story of "The Abbot."

When King Robert Bruce's body was found in 1819, in the subvaults of the Abbey Church of Dunfermline, it was shown that his breastbone had been sawed through, in order to permit the removal of his great heart.

HEALING "WOUNDS" IN STEEL

Frenchman Has Devised Machine Which Is Really a Marvel of Inventive Ingenuity.

Very remarkable indeed is a machine set up in France for making repairs to airplanes, remarks the Washington Star. This machine is said to be the only one of its kind, and is due to the ingenuity of Gustave Rabin. It may be described as a device for cauterizing "wounded steel" to "heal" itself in something like the way that wounded flesh heals.

The device is almost automatic, is operated by electricity and is based upon the galvanic principle. It needs only one or two men to watch it; they being guided by a chart, showing in many colors the place of metal to be repaired, the exact repairs necessary, the composition of the galvanic bath, the current needed, the diameter of the conducting wires and the time of immersion. All this is worked out mathematically to the minutest fraction.

The machine is employed to restore worn or broken parts of delicate machinery, most of which are difficult to replace. When an American observer saw it there were lying on a table beside it parts it had just repaired which would have cost $4,000, and much time to replace. In the week previous it had turned out 300 pieces, all of great importance, for nothing less is confined to it.

REFUSED TO BELIEVE HIM

Jury Foreman's Remarkable Explanation for Declining to Credit Defendant's Plea of Guilty.

Some years ago in a Western state, then a territory, a popular citizen became involved with an influential and overbearing character and killed him. Public sentiment leaned toward the defendant, but the law was against him, and when the day of trial came the defendant, his counsel and friends held a consultation, and fearful of the consequences, they decided that the defendant should plead guilty and beg the court's mercy.

The jury was charged by the court and retired. Presently it returned, and the foreman said:

"We find the defendant not guilty."

The judge viewed the jury in surprise and said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, how be it? This defendant pleads guilty, and you find him not guilty?"

The foreman answered:

"Well, your honor, the defendant is such a liar we can't believe him under oath."—Progressive Grocer.

Beggars' Trade Union.

A new terror has been added to continental traveling. A recent report from Constantinople states that the beggars of Stamboul have formed themselves into a trade union, says London Answers.

The members go to work quite methodically. Each morning they hold a meeting in the open space in front of the Bazarist Mosque, they cannot afford other offices, although some of the members are said to be rich—and here they discuss the business of the day. Then after the agenda has been read and approved, the brothers in beggary disperse, and set about the business of collecting alms.

Just as other trade unions forbid their members to work for less than certain prescribed wages, so the beggars are not allowed to beg for any sum less than one hundred paras. Any smaller gift is spurned as detrimental to their dignity.

Chew Chew. A health clown makes the rounds of New York City schools, spreading the gospel of fresh air, proper food and cleanliness.

With him is his little dog, Crenio, whose stunts include paying his face as if washing when asked what he does in the morning.

The school children are going wild about Chew Chew and Crenio. They are absorbing health facts, because the presentation is made in an interesting way. And they will remember the health clown and what he taught, in their old age.

Making school interesting is the greatest problem of education. People in this horrid civilization remember interesting things, forget the uninteresting.

Fish Eradicates Scarlet Fever.

The Mexican version of "have you a little fish in your home?" is "have you a little fish in your home?"

This arises from the use of a peculiar fish, of the mammalian species, that eats the mosquitoes and "wigglers" in water, thus preventing the spread of yellow fever. All bodies of water in the city are stocked with the fish, which are provided by health authorities. In this way the mosquitoes are kept down and yellow fever almost eradicated.

Signifies Good Faith.

In ancient days the addition of a cross to the signature did not always indicate that the signer could not write, but was added as an attestation of good faith.

NEW WAY TO PUT CAT OUT

New Yorker Would Seem to Have Done Considerable Amount of Thinking to Conserve Energy.

"I have heard of many methods for conserving energy practiced by New Yorkers," said the commuter who was spending the summer in town, according to the New York Sun, "but never have I seen anything to equal the man who lives on the second floor across the yard from me."

"I am staying in the old Washington square section and the back yards are fair sized and are together. I was sitting on the small porch the other afternoon about 8 o'clock when this man comes to his window with a large white cat. He fumbles about a bit and first thing we know he is letting the creature down by a long rope attached to a sort of harness that, fitted about the cat's body, to the back yard."

"He then tied the tape to something inside the room and sat down to read his paper. In about half an hour the cord was jerked, which attracted the man's attention, and he started pulling the cat upward until he had it safe on the sill, when he took off the harness."

"And I wish you could have seen the forced expression on his face when he caught us roaring with laughter at him. All this to save himself walking down one flight of stairs to put the cat out in the yard."

ONE CENT A WORD ADVS. BRING RESULTS

PFROMMER REALTY ACTION IS BEGUN

Plumber's Wife Asserts She Transferred Her Share to Husband to Restore Family Harmony and Silence Mention of Marshall—This Didn't Result and She Claims Fraud.

When supreme court convened Monday afternoon the action brought by Anna C. Pfrommer against her husband Joseph F. Pfrommer was taken up for trial. The action is to set aside a conveyance of real estate on the grounds of fraud.

Judge John G. Van Etten and Ex-Mayor William D. Brinley appear for plaintiff and Frank W. Brooks and Chris J. Flanagan appear for defendant.

The action grows out of the transfer of Mrs. Pfrommer's share in the real estate, owned by husband and wife, on Brewster street this city to Mr. Pfrommer. The transfer was made after Mr. and Mrs. Pfrommer had had family differences and according to the story told on the witness stand the transfer was made by Mrs. Pfrommer with the understanding that after she transferred her share to her husband the differences would be forgotten and they would "bury the hatchet." She now claims that after the transfer had been made the hatchet was buried for only two days and then was dug up and the trouble started again. She alleges that the agreement was made by her husband only to secure her share of the property.

Defendant claims that in 1910 when they bought the property he did as is usually done, he had the title taken jointly in both his and his wife's name. For several months prior to May, 1922, there had been "unhappy differences" according to defendant and Mrs. Pfrommer seeking to adjust these differences and cover up certain acts had offered to deed over her share to her husband and also offered to sell her diamond ring to patch up matters. Defendant claims that Mrs. Pfrommer became very friendly with a salesman of plumber's supplies by the name of Marshall and that this was one of the things which she sought to patch up. Defendant alleges that his wife on certain occasions went to the "movies" with Marshall and met him evenings on Albany avenue. Misconduct is alleged.

All misconduct is denied by plaintiff, who claims that her husband mistreated her and by constant trouble caused her to become nervous to such an extent that she lost weight, being reduced from 150 pounds to 115 pounds in a short space of time.

Mrs. Pfrommer was the first witness called. She said she with her two children were residing on Brewster street. She said that over a week ago she had bought the property and had talked of the property every time he became "peevish" and said that he should have title in his name as no woman should have her name on a deed.

In May, 1921, Mrs. Pfrommer said the first real trouble began. She had told Mr. Pfrommer that she was going to do some ironing on a certain date when he asked her to do some office work in connection with his plumbing business. She said she would do the office work at night and iron during the afternoon. She changed her mind and did not iron and when her husband came home in the afternoon he accused her of misconduct with someone. This she testified he kept up during the night.

In August he and one of the boys went to a ball game at Saugerties while she and some friends with another child went for an automobile ride to Newburgh and Orange Lake. On account of a severe rain, she testified they were compelled to drive slow coming home and it was after midnight when they arrived home. He again accused her of misconduct and next day while she was washing he struck her and knocked her into the laundry tub, injuring her to such an extent that she was confined to her bed. She said he frequently choked her in the presence of her son.

Mrs. Pfrommer also testified that her husband had asked her to sell her diamond ring to help pay for a new sedan automobile. She offered to get a position and turn over her money instead of selling her ring.

She also testified that her husband had for a long time been in the habit of coming up to her and pointing his finger in her face. This he did so frequently that at times she became nearly mad. Her son, she said, had told his father that if he kept doing this it would drive his mother crazy. She also testified that Pfrommer had threatened her life.

Finally she agreed to transfer her share in the property to her husband provided their differences could be settled. The name of Marshall had been mentioned to her so often that she agreed to go to a lawyer and sign the necessary papers provided her husband would never mention Marshall again to her.

They visited Chris Flanagan's office where the story of Marshall and Mrs. Pfrommer was told, according to the witness, and where she denied any misconduct. Mr. Flanagan finally agreed to draw up the papers and have them ready the following morning for signatures. After this agreement they left the office, kissed and went home. For two days things went well and then plaintiff testified she noticed a strained feeling again. When she endeavored to embrace her husband on the third day she said he asked her not to and when she inquired if they had not agreed to agree he replied that they had but asked her not to embrace him.

Later he told her that the agreement was only "verbal" and that he had the property.

Mrs. Pfrommer testified that she had on some occasions met Marshall on Broadway when she was coming uptown and he had asked her to come along. She also said that Marshall had been there and that they had sat together but that she had always paid her own way. He never had paid for her admission.

Cross-examination of Mrs. Pfrommer took up the remainder of the afternoon and when court opened this morning Mrs. Pfrommer was still on the stand for re-direct examination. In her re-direct, Mrs. Pfrommer testified that her husband had asked her to treat Mr. Marshall well in order that he might get lower prices from Marshall for plumbing supplies.

Marshall was entertained as often as once a week, special dishes being prepared for him at the request of Mr. Pfrommer. Mr. Marshall bought whiskey which he and Pfrommer and other guests drank. She served them with cake and wine. These parties would last until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. She never drank, as she is a prohibitionist and identified with the Prohibition party. They tried to induce her to drink whiskey, but she refused and threatened to smash the glass. Pfrommer said he got reduced prices from Marshall, who sold him plumbing supplies below the cost of manufacture.

Mrs. Pfrommer said she had gone riding with Marshall and Pfrommer in Marshall's car, sitting between the two men because they insisted on it. Marshall made insulting remarks and she protested to her husband, who said she ought to be able to take a joke, especially when Marshall gave him such good prices. Pfrommer said she said, had admitted that he had no ground for divorce but meant to get one if it took his last dollar—he meant to get rid of her in some way.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brooks, the witness said that for about a month her husband had found fault with her relations with Marshall. There were no parties during that time. The last party was about the first of March.

The witness was cross-examined in great detail as to a letter to her sister in which she writes that someone had told Pfrommer certain things and that she thought "central" had told him. She explained that their telephone conversation was with his mother and a woman friend referred to as "Jerry," and that a reference to Marshall not doing as he had promised meant that he had promised to get another territory as salesman, a promise he had made when she told him of her husband's accusations.

Joseph M. Pfrommer, 16 years of age, son of the parties in the case, was the next witness. Asked to tell what he had seen and heard of the relations between his father and mother for the past year, he began with a day when he found his mother in tears and hysterical. He testified to various epithets he had heard his father apply to his mother and to threats made by the father to murder them all. Repeated assaults were described. Pfrommer urged his wife to sell her diamond ring and she tried to do so, but the price offered was too low. Marshall offered to take it to Troy and sell it and Pfrommer urged that this be done. Pfrommer asked Marshall to teach Mrs. Pfrommer to run an automobile.

Parties given to entertain Marshall and visits of Marshall were described. Pfrommer always welcomed Marshall to his home and urged Mrs. Pfrommer to aid in entertaining him, as it helped to get lower prices for plumbing supplies. The witness told of Pfrommer urging his wife to deed the property to him and said that after the deed was executed Pfrommer said everything was now all right and as if they had just been married again. Three days later Pfrommer told her, "I've got the property now and you can go to hell." Repeatedly Pfrommer accused his wife of intimacy with various men, butchers, bakers, doctors, etc.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brooks, the witness said he loved his mother and had said, "No matter what she has done I am going to stick to her."

Louis F. Pfrommer, 13 years old, gave similar testimony as to assaults, accusations, etc., and demands that she deed the property to her husband. This closed the plaintiff's case.

COUNT TOLSTOY HERE SATURDAY

Count Tolstoy comes to Kingston Saturday under the patronage of The Kingston Chapter of the Schoolwomen's Club of the Hudson Valley. The Chapter is giving a luncheon at the Eagle Hotel on Saturday at 1:30 o'clock, after which Count Ilya Tolstoy will lecture.

Count Tolstoy is the son of Count Leo Tolstoy, known in the literary world as "The Conscience of the World." The Tolstoy family is one of the oldest noble Russian families. The present Count Tolstoy was educated by his father at Yasnaya Polyana, the Tolstoy ancestral estate near Moscow. Like his illustrious father, Count Ilya Tolstoy is vigorously opposed to governments born and sustained by violence rather than by the popular and enlightened will of the people. He is firmly opposed to the Bolshevik regime in Russia. He praises the stand taken by the American government in refusing to recognize the soviet regime considering that such recognition would but prolong the agony of the suffering Russian people. There are still a few of the hundred tickets for Count Tolstoy's lecture to be had of the members of the Schoolwomen's Club.

CATTLE FOOD BIG PROBLEM

Importance of Winter Fodder in Switzerland and Norway Cannot Be Overestimated.

Mountain peoples depend for much food on cows and goats. The problem of getting enough winter feed for the animals is a difficult one. And so this art of mowing has been developed to extremes. In Switzerland not a spear of grass escapes. Grass only three inches high is cut three times a year. The Norwegian peasant gathers a small hay harvest from the roofs of his house, and harns and from the edges of the road. Swiss peasants, called wildheuer, meaning wild hay gatherers, secure hay from ledges of rocks. The risk is so great that the law in places only allows one wildheuer to a family.

The traveler in Norway frequently sees huge bundles of hay sliding down to a valley on wires stretched from some high precipice on a flord. This represents the harvest from isolated spots or from the field of the summer shepherd. The economy of vegetative resources is caused by the necessity of finding fodder for the six or seven months of stall-feeding. Because of frequent rains in Swiss regions, no chance is taken in drying the hay. The farmer's family keeps tossing the hay to hurry drying.

VAST ROAD-WORK IN ULSTER COUNTY

Construction and Repairs in Last Two Years Run Into Huge Figures and Have Done Much For General Good—Among Best In State.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Oct. 17.—An analysis of the highway construction work completed in 57 counties of the state since the inauguration of Governor Miller shows that no public improvement has done more for the general good than the development of the highway system. Important trunk lines and connecting links have been built in every county and at a very reasonable cost. Today New York's system of good roads ranks second to none in the world.

Highway Commissioner Herbert S. Sisson in reviewing the work of his department under the Miller administration pointed out the vast operations conducted in Ulster county. In the past two years contracts for construction amounting to $885,400 have been completed. At present there are in operation contracts amounting to $835,000 of which $400,000 will be completed before the close of the season. It is expected that contracts calling for an expenditure of $251,000 will be awarded within the next two months.

To maintain and reconstruct 183 miles of improved highways in Ulster county the state expended $313,000 in 1921. The estimated expenditures for this year are $309,000.

The completion of the Highland-New Paltz concrete road this year is one of the most important improvements made in Ulster county. This highway is a direct route between the two villages and will result in the saving of thousands of dollars to farmers who are furnished with a direct route for their products to the market centers.

Work is progressing rapidly on the Wurtsboro-Ellettsville road, part of which will be completed this year. This road will complete the route from Kingston to Middletown, forming an important link through the Shawangunk Valley to Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The contract for the bridge over Rondout Creek between Kingston and Sloatsburg and new approach at the east end was completed this year at a cost of about $690,000 and satisfied a long felt want for direct connection between Port Ewen and Kingston where traffic from the River Road was formerly dependent upon an antiquated ferry.

The completion of the concrete pavement through Rosendale eliminated a dangerous curve and eased a steep grade. This section completed the route from Rifton to Stone Ridge.

Contracts for approaches to new overhead crossings over the West Shore at Malden and West Park will be let this year, thus eliminating the last of the grade crossings along the West Shore of the Hudson.

It is proposed to let contracts this year for the construction of the road between Bearsville and Willow and for the reconstruction of three and one half miles of the road from Pine Hill to Big Indian.

Tourists have pronounced Ulster county roads among the best in the state. Throughout the season a large force of patrolmen has been employed and traffic has been maintained at all times.

RELICS FROM THE ANCIENT RONDOUT FREEMAN

E. U. Barley of Whitfield has in his possession two relics of the old Rondout Freeman. One is a receipt for subscription of L. Barley, dated April 24, 1847, and the other is a notice, dated March 1, 1849, from D. L. Wells and E. Hudler, assignees of Gosman & Wells, to pay $1.18 due in subscription to either of the assignees or to John B. Steele, a lawyer in Rondout. L. Barley was the father of E. U. Barley. The Rondout Freeman referred to in those receipts are not in any way connected with the present Freeman. It went out of existence on the failure of Gosman & Wells. The present Freeman was started a number of years later by Van Keuren & Gildersleeve. The plant of the Rondout Freeman of 1847 was sold to John P. Hageman, who began issuing the Rondout Courier, which continued until about 40 years ago.

Shoulders Not Alike.

To the majority of persons the statement that their shoulders are not of the same height will come as a surprise, but tailors know that almost invariably the left shoulder is higher than the right. If a baby's shoulders are measured it will be found that they are exactly even. That they do not remain so is blamed upon parents, who as a rule lead their young and growing children by the left hand. This is a natural manner of leading the child, as it shields it from bumps of persons met in its walks, but the muscles and bones are thus continually raised and in the end drawn permanently out of position, although the change is so slight that it is not noticeable unless accurate measurements are taken.

An Invitation to Present and Prospective Investors in United Hudson Convertible Bonds

The new concrete road from Highland to New Paltz is now practically finished and affords a delightful motor trip from the Hudson River westward to the Wallkill and thence north to Rifton where the United Hudson's big dam is under construction. Several hundred men are at work on this project which when completed will create a lake over two miles long and in places over 100 feet deep.

We suggest that you plan to visit the scene of this activity before cold weather sets in and before the area is flooded. A personal inspection will give you a better idea of the progress that is being made than anything we might tell you.

Farther up the river, you can get occasional glimpses from the road, of the big steel tower transmission line which is now being extended from Catskill northward to connect with a similar line to enable us to receive electric energy at Schenectady from the Adirondack Power system. A little to the west and north of Catskill Village, you can see the new substation and the great structural steel switching yard which is being erected.

At Athens, you get a good view of the immense towers supporting the high tension lines that stretch across the river at that point carrying electric energy to Hudson and the territory beyond.

When making this trip, do not hesitate to get out of your car and inspect the various plants and construction jobs that are under way. Visitors are always welcome at such places throughout the Central Hudson System of gas and electric companies. Ask for the man in charge. If he happens to be too busy to conduct you personally, he will delegate somebody who will guide you about. Aside from the enjoyment and the educational features of such a trip, the security holder who makes it will gain a better idea of the property and the business organization in which he has invested his money.

The second allotment of First Mortgage 6% Gold Bonds is now being offered. They may be secured on the same terms as the previous offering and they carry the same privilege of conversion to Cumulative Preferred Stock paying 7%.

Everybody loves 'em, especially men and boys. And mother likes them too because it's such an easy matter to fry them. No fuss, no muss—just stir up a batter and put on the griddle.

Costs More Worth It!

OCCIDENT

The Guaranteed Flour

Is a Money-Saver for the Housewife.

Because it will make better bread

OCCIDENT FLOUR is made from the best hard wheats grown in the Northwest. No mixture of winter and inferior wheats. The choicest Northwest wheats cost more than wheats grown in other sections. That is one of the many reasons why OCCIDENT FLOUR—Costs More—Worth It!

The OCCIDENT Mills have double the purifications system—result: purer flour, more nutritious and better tasting bread—not the nutty taste—for the wheat is cleaned before grinding and the dirt is removed by washing every bushel of wheat in twenty gallons of water.

Remember!

Every Sack of OCCIDENT FLOUR saves you money

Ask your grocer. He will tell you honestly why OCCIDENT is better in quality and why you should pay more for it.

The Price of Shoes Can be Too Low

Don't buy shoes through a pane of glass. Too many people judge shoes by the outside looks. It is better to know the make and to know the store that sells them.

Lots of people have found that out. It is better to pay a dollar or two more and get real shoes made of real leather than to "save" a dollar or two and get imitation shoes of cheap construction. We specialize on standard makes with years of reputation and service.

LANDIS VISITS LEGION CONVENTION

Samuel Gompers Admits He Is Secondary Attraction When Veterans Start to Talk Baseball.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New Orleans, Oct. 17.—Samuel Gompers, ruler of organized labor and former Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, czar of organized baseball, joined today at the fourth annual convention of the American Legion here in paying tribute to the leading part played by the nation's ex-service men in helping to win the World War.

As the president of the American Federation of Labor and the high commissioner of the national pastime appeared together on the same platform, they were accorded a tumultuous welcome by the former "dough boys" and "gobs" who crowded the big improvised convention hall.

The white-haired "judge" was surrounded by a growing group of baseball fans eager to swap opinions with him as to why Babe Ruth did not deliver a single home run in the recent Yankee disaster at New York city. They wanted to know if he didn't agree with them that "Jawn" McGraw was "some manager."

The judge faced the fire of baseball fans with a good natured grin and he appeared to enjoy the situation as much as the boys who pressed about him.

"I'll never miss an American Legion convention as long as I live," was Landis's greeting to them. "I want to see you boys continue your constructive efforts toward higher Americanism."

Gompers was also the central figure of friendly groups but he smilingly admitted that he had not a chance to compete with Landis as the holder of the key to so popular subject as baseball.

"The great organization of the workers and the great organization of the veterans of the World War most of whom are workers by hand or brain, have every good thing in common," said Gompers. "These two great organizations are perhaps above all others responsible for the future of America. There is no good thing that we cannot accomplish for our country and its people if we put our strength into the task."

THE DAUGHTERY OPINION.

Judge Clearwater Finds Conflict With International Law.

Judge A. T. Clearwater in a letter printed in this morning's New York Herald says:

A narrow and strict construction of the Volstead act possibly may sustain the opinion and conclusions of the Attorney-General. They are, however, at complete variance with the law of nations as defined by great writers upon international law and for centuries accepted by the civilized nations of the world, all of whom regard the ocean as not capable of being possessed or controlled as private property but as free for navigation, fishing, business, commerce and the pursuit of pleasure.

Its waters—save within a marine league of the littoral and between headlands, as for instance, from Cape Ann to Cape Cod, from Nantucket to Montauk Point, from that point to the capes of the Delaware and from the south cape of Florida to the Mississippi—cannot to the slightest extent be appropriated or controlled in time of peace, then the subjects of all nations meet there on a footing of absolute equality and independence. No nation has any right of jurisdiction at sea except over the persons of its own subjects in its own vessels, the vessels of a nation are considered as portions of its territory. Thus persons and articles on board a ship are protected and governed solely by the law of the country to which it belongs.

Every vessel in time of peace has the right to consult its own safety and convenience, to pursue its own course and business without disturbance, and it is not permissible for any nation to treat, contraband, any article of the cargo, equipment, food or supplies for the officers or crew of the vessel of any nation while in the port of a foreign country unless the same be disembarked for use or sale or be dangerous to other shipping, to wharves or adjacent property. Grotius, Puffendorf, Vattel, Rutherford so hold Selden in his "Mare Clausum" questions the attitude of Grotius but Sir William Scott in the celebrated case of the Twee Gebroeders, 3 Robinson Admiralty Reports, 336, demolished Selden's argument. Bynkershoek, discussing Selden's position, held there was no instance in time of peace in which a non-dangerous cargo not disembarked was to the slightest extent subject to any sovereign power other than the one chartering the vessel containing it.

It is doubtful if any attempt to enforce such conclusions as are embraced in the opinion of the Attorney-General has been made since the demolition of the Portuguese claim to an exclusive trade to the Indies, to the south Atlantic and the Indian Ocean in the sixteenth century.

The United States hardly can afford to align itself with barbaric tribes, and fanaticism is a recrudescence of the barbaric spirit.

SMITH PLAYS MILLER'S PUBLIC SERVICE POLICY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Ogdensburg, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Continuing his tour through the state, Alfred Smith, Democratic candidate for governor, arrived here today. At Troy last night, the candidate played Governor Miller's public service legislation and declared it was a "violation of the fundamental principle of local control of home affairs."

He also took the governor to account for his waterpower policy and said: "If I admitted any economy at all during Governor Miller's administration, I would be obliged to say it was offset a million times by the loss to the people of the return from their own property when handed over to private corporations for profits."

TEACHERS' WELFARE LEAGUE ADDRESSED BY GRAVES

The Teachers' Welfare League of the State of New York met at the court house in Syracuse on October 14th. The teachers were welcomed to the city by Governor Miller who said he came as "Nat, the Pedagogue," and who talked informally with the teachers. After a short business session, State Commissioner, Hon. Franklin P. Graves, led a "round table" conference, the topic of which was, "The Teacher, a National Asset." At the close of Dr. Graves's talk, luncheon was enjoyed at the Mizpah Inn, following which the business session was resumed at the court house.

The following officers were elected: President, Melville A. Cronin of Troy; vice-president, M. D. Stockwell, Syracuse; secretary, Florence E. Hall, Watertown; treasurer, Edith Armitage, Auburn.

The executive committee met in the evening at the Onondaga Hotel and decided to have a report printed of the proceedings of the meeting in order that each member of the Teachers' Welfare League in the state might have a copy.

ROUSING RECEPTION FOR GOVERNOR AT ELMIRA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Elmira, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Elmira Republicans have planned a rousing reception for Governor Nathan L. Miller when he speaks here tonight. Tomorrow the governor will go to Hornell and during the latter part of the week he will be in the western part of the state.

Speaking in Binghamton last night, Governor Miller asserted that former Governor Alfred E. Smith, his Democratic opponent, administered the government to "please and not to serve."

Miller said that Smith, as a good fellow, was costly to the state. This campaign appears to be resolving itself into a contest between lung power and facts," the governor said.

MRS. McNALLY DENIES ACCUSATION

Didn't Murder Twin Babies and Sub-stitute Dolls, She Says, in Face of Strong Evidence Against Her.
(Copyright 1922, by Chicago Evening American.)
(Copyright 1922, by International News Service.)
(Reproduction Prohibited.)

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Hammond, Ind., Oct. 17.—Mrs. Hazel McNally, 26-year-old wife of Frank McNally, a 47-year-old machinist who accuses her of the murder of their two children—twins, a boy and a girl—today denied that she killed her babies.
"I have never had children," she told me in an interview.
Mrs. James Griffiths, a practical nurse of Hammond, made this statement however: "I saw the children when I attended Mrs. McNally for the eight days following December 8."
The husband of Mrs. McNally says he has never seen the faces of his children.
Gray-clad and with her blonde hair softly drawn back from her palely aesthetic face, Mrs. McNally sat in her cell at the police station and told her story. She is hardly a woman—this thin, almost frail girl.
"In November, 1920, I saw Mr. McNally's advertisement in a Chicago paper for a housekeeper," she said, "and I decided that this was a splendid opportunity to recuperate. He was living at West Hammond at that time. Five months after I entered his employ, we were married. That was on April 28, 1921.
"Some time in December, the eighth I think I bought two dolls and told Mr. McNally that they were alive.
"I wanted to be sure that he loved children. It was only a little while after that that I told him about the dolls and that was all there was to it. "I have not borne twins. Since May 1919, when I underwent a major operation, I have been incapable of motherhood."

"About September, 1921, we moved to Hammond, Ind., and lived at No. 168 Dearborn street.
"This August we went to South Bend, Ind., and on September 22 I left Mr. McNally because I felt that I felt that I could no longer bear his little underhand tricks his habit of doing hateful little things. It was the small matters which disturbed me. Mr. McNally has never been big enough to do things in a large way whether for good or evil.
"On the 7th of October I returned to South Bend at the request of Mr. McNally's daughter, Mrs. Peter Krzyzowski, and visited her. Frank asked me to return to him. I refused.
"I was therefore arrested on a charge of assault and battery and held on $5,000 bail. I was released, ordered held for Hammond and brought back here to face a charge of murder.
"When this is over I shall not only sue for immediate divorce, but shall also sue Mr. McNally for false arrest. I am entirely innocent."
Mary Griffiths, a nurse and the next door neighbor of Mrs. McNally, said today that she attended Mrs. McNally during her confinement. She told of the times she saw the babies, of the mother's attitude toward the children and the subsequent rumors she heard of dolls replacing the live infants.
"Mrs. McNally and I were neighbors," said the nurse. "About noon on the 8th of December Mr. McNally called me and told me that they had twins, and for me to come over soon but not to hurry, that everything was all right.
"I was naturally anxious to see them but when I came there Mrs. McNally would not let me touch the babies. I saw their faces. She told me that one was a boy weighing four pounds and that the other was a girl weighing three pounds.
"I saw the babies nursed and I know that they were alive. Mrs. McNally told me that she was a trained nurse and I therefore did what she told me. I did not bathe the infants. I did not touch them at all.

When anyone came into the room, Mrs. McNally would cover their faces. She said they had weak eyes because the midwife had used too much boracic acid right after birth. I learned later that no one attended her during the delivery and that only Mr. McNally was home when the babies arrived.
"Mrs. McNally was not happy over her children. And from time to time she told me that she thought the girl would not live long.
"One morning—the seventh—I came in and found Mrs. McNally wiping blood from the mouth and nose of the boy. The baby looked sort of dead to me. I did not see his face after that at any time. I don't know whether she ever picked up that bundle or not. She removed the bloody little dress and I put it into cold water to take the bloodstains out. Mrs. McNally told me not to bother as she would send the little garment to the laundry.
Whether the baby was dead at that time or not I do not know. I do know that a baby which had been suffocated will sometimes bleed at the mouth and nose when brought to the air again.
"I left the following day. I have never seen Mrs. McNally or the children since. I heard from different people that Mrs. McNally was wheeling dolls in her double baby buggy."

LLOYD-GEORGE DELAYS QUITTING

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Oct. 17.—A report was circulated by the Central News today that Premier Lloyd-George had decided not to resign right away but will announce on Saturday dissolution of Parliament. The premier will speak at Leeds on Saturday.
Wholesale resignations from the ministry are threatened if the convention of the Tory members of parliament on Thursday votes against a continuation of the coalition. In that event the premier would resign and the following Unionists would seek to form a new political party: Austen Chamberlain, government spokesman in the House of Commons; Winston S. Churchill, secretary of state for colonies; Lord Birkenhead, the lord chancellor; Earl Balfour, former premier and former foreign secretary; Sir Robert Horne, chancellor of the exchequer.
Mr. Churchill is so ill of gastroenteritis that he will be unable to take part in active politics for some days. Consequently he will be unable to attend the Tory convention Thursday.
Mrs. Van Vliet Improving.
It was reported at the Kingston City Hospital this morning that the condition of Mrs. Edward Van Vliet of Franklin street shows a slight improvement. Mrs. Van Vliet was seriously injured when knocked down by the runaway auto of Bertton A. Turck on Abel street. Her husband was instantly killed at the time.
Our Growing Population.
The following births have been reported to the health board:
Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Jones, 16 Ann street, a son, George Joseph.
Mr. and Mrs. Robert Proper, 49S Washington avenue, a son, Robert Arthur.

First Illustrated Book.
It was the Roman author Varro, who in B. C. 70, issued the first book illustrated with portraits. He was not a great writer and he had been struggling for recognition for a good many years, when he suddenly conceived the idea of preparing a volume containing the biographies of 700 of his famous fellow-citizens. History is silent on the rather interesting question whether Varro charged them for his services, but it is loud in his praise as the first writer who conceived the idea of illustrating his work with portraits. They were crudely drawn. But they were illustrations all the same, and after that the custom of embellishing historical works with such drawings became a fad among the writers of those days.
Silk Stockings.
It appears that Henry II, when preparing for the marriage of his sister in 1559, first had the idea for silk hose, M. F. (Bradford), and at that epoch-making event he was the first to wear knitted silk stockings. A hundred years later one Hindres established a factory for stockings in the Bois de Boulogne. This was the first factory in France. It was a success from the start, and when it received protection from the ministers it became a gold mine. In 1686 the venture was turned into a company. From it arose the society of stocking makers. At this time ribbed stockings were made in England, but it was not until nearly a century later that such wear was introduced into France.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES

same purposes for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923.

Maternity and Infancy Act.
The maternity and infancy act provides for cooperation between the National government and the separate states and authorizes an appropriation of approximately $1,500,000 for the current fiscal year, which may be increased in the sum of $1,000,000 a year for five years.

Independent Citizenship For Women.

The act relating to the naturalization and citizenship of married women provides for the recognition of alien married women who desire and are qualified to become American citizens by permitting them to become naturalized without waiting for the naturalization of their husbands. It provides against the automatic loss of an American woman's citizenship by her marriage to an alien, and for the restoration to citizenship of such women who have heretofore lost their citizenship by such marriages.

Immigration Restriction Act.

The gates of Free America have always swung open for the oppressed of all lands, for those seeking to better their condition, and we desire to keep them open, provided, however, that we shall not allow this flood to come more rapidly than we can assimilate the newcomers to the ideas and ideals of true Americanism, the principles of liberty under laws. For the time being we have restricted the coming immigrants, welcoming as many as we believe to be safe for America, and we stand ready again to widen the door of opportunity when we may be able thoroughly to Americanize a larger number of well-intentioned people who may seek homes among us.

Association of Producers.

It is believed that through the operations of organizations like the Association of Producers of Agricultural Products that it may be possible to eliminate unnecessary middlemen, to improve conditions of marketing and while assuring the producer a reasonable price, protect the consumer against the high prices which he has frequently paid for products for which the producer received little.

The Naval Scrapping Act.

The snuff world has sung the praises of the great accomplishment of the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments in putting an end to the mad rush of competitive naval expansion and construction. Its effect is reflected in the reduction of the personnel of our navy and a decrease of one hundred and twenty-five millions in naval appropriations. The so-called naval scrapping bill gave legislative effect to the provisions of the treaty on limitation of naval armament. It authorized the President to take the steps necessary to make the terms of the treaty effective by scrapping a portion of the ships now under construction, which are not to be completed, and authorized the conversion of two of them into great airplane carriers.

Monthly Payment of Pensions.

Civil War pensions have for some time petitioned the Congress that their pensions be paid monthly instead of quarterly, and Congress responded by making provisions to that effect. This increase in the frequency of payment is very much appreciated, particularly by those who have little or no means other than their pension. The change has resulted in a considerably increased cost, but this is justified in view of the benefits conferred on the pensioners.

Tributes to Greatness.

The marvelous achievements of the American people under the leadership and in harmony with the policies of the Republican party have no parallel in human history, and the roster of the great men who have served the nation and the world as Republicans stands unrivalled in the annals of time.

Heartened by the inspiring record of party accomplishments and party leadership, we Republicans of Congress consecrate ourselves anew to the maintenance of high standards of enlightened and faithful public service in the interest of all the people.

In the spirit of Lincoln and Roosevelt, we have met the manifold problems of the day under the fine leadership of Warren G. Harding.

The record of the Sixty-seventh Congress has been written. I have told you of what we have accomplished, and on my record as a member of that Congress I again ask your support at the coming election. (Applause.)

Duty To Sustain President.

Miss Anne Rhodes of New York city, who followed Congressman Ward, said in part:
I am going to speak on the state issues and ticket but first I must say a few words about the national issues and the duty which New York state owes to itself and to the nation to sustain President Harding.

"New York state cannot afford not to be the administration side in this campaign. We have a United States senator and congressman elected this fall, and we must return our Republican representatives to Washington in order that they may continue the work they have begun. They have given splendid service in the past and the results are all that the men and women of the Empire state could desire, and if we want that wonderful work continued, we must see that Senator Calder and all of our Republican congressmen are retained to Congress to help President Harding in his work of setting this country back to a normal condition.

State a Business Proposition.

"What is New York state? It is a big business enterprise, and it should be treated so. It has not always been treated that way, but it has been since Governor Miller has been in office. (Applause.)

"Every business man knows that one of the heaviest expenses of any business enterprise is the labor turn over. Putting people in and out of jobs is not only a loss of valuable time but is a direct loss of money because of the time consumed by the new people in learning the business.

"Two years ago the voters of New York lavished their votes in Governor Miller, and for two years we have had a business administration. You will find some people who would like to nibble at the public treasury who will say that it isn't quite as good an administration as some other administration, but don't be taken in by such talk. Keep the men who are there in office until the reforms and betterments they have been accomplishing shall have become so firmly established they will be a part of the state life itself.

An Agreeable Sensation.
"You know of the decrease in state expenditures and the decrease in direct and indirect taxation, because that is a most agreeable sensation and one you have not experienced in quite a while until Governor Miller became governor.
"What he did was to combine and co-ordinate the different state departments so that they worked in perfect harmony. All state affairs at Albany are under two heads—the administrative and executive departments. Often in the past these two departments pulled apart from each other, with the result that often we paid bills twice, for the same thing, and we had nothing to show for our money at the end.

What Governor Miller Did.
"When Governor Miller took office, he found that a large number of people were employed who practically had no work to do. If something ever had been started, not matter how soon the work was finished, somebody continued to hold the jobs which had been created to do the work, and we, the taxpayers of the state, paid the bill.

"Governor Miller abolished all those jobs where the work had been completed. Then he found a large number of people who were doing the same work—there was a duplication of effort in almost every department.
"He succeeded in reconciling differences between different departments, between different sides of the government, and instead of making peace at each other, after a time they began to work together. That was one of the first things he accomplished.
"Then he found that many supplies purchased by the state were so nearly alike that they could be standardized. Then he standardized the methods of assigning people to jobs, and the system of installing people in jobs where they could do the most efficient work at once put the state on a business basis.

State Institutions.
"When some of you read in the newspapers that Governor Miller had personally visited every state institution, you may have thought it was a simple matter for him. Just to satisfy myself, I looked up the record of state institutions. There are thirteen hospitals in the state under state management for the care of those who are mentally sick. Some of them have a capacity for 5,000 patients, while nearer New York city they have a capacity as high as 7,500. Just think of the army of people required to care for the patients in these state hospitals.

"Then there are minor correctional institutions; institutions for the deaf, the dumb and the blind—all receiving state aid. There are thirty-eight institutions, representing a very large number of people who are employed. Then there are the penal institutions besides.

Buy At Wholesale Now.

"The purchasing for these institutions had been done at retail at an expense of twenty million dollars a year. There never had been a central purchasing agency. Instead, there were eighty separate purchasing agencies, and the institutions bought when and where they chose and had things charged to the state.
"Governor Miller made a study of each institution, and he studied them with an understanding mind. Then he established a bureau to work out a business plan.

"First, he established a bureau of standards to find out what the institutions needed in their every-day life, things like sheets, crockery, cooking utensils and a dozen other things such as every household uses daily and which are used also in state institutions. Everything was worked out in standardized form. Then the central purchasing agency was established. That doesn't mean that one order for all of one kind of supplies was given to one firm.
"What standardization means is, that a certain standard was established for all of a certain kind of supplies. If beds were needed, they were made of one standard, so that manufacturers could produce more cheaply, and the state could buy at a lower price. Then orders were given to the producers instead of retail dealers.

Getting Money's Worth.

"Then something else was started by Governor Miller which never before had been achieved. Someone was appointed to learn if the state was actually getting what it paid for. In past years it was not unheard of for the state to pay for 5,000 beds for state institutions and to receive only 2,000, but now when the state orders 5,000 beds, it gets 5,000. What does that mean to you and to me? It means that we pay the bills, and we get only 2,000 beds when 5,000 are ordered and paid for, that the next year we must pay again for the 2,000 that were not delivered on the first order. Now, that is only one thing. That is the way in which the man in whom we invested our votes two years ago has met our expectations. Did it pay us to vote for him again?

"I can tell you of my personal knowledge that after Governor Miller went in office, there was marked improvement in the care of inmates of state institutions. When he went to visit an institution, he did not simply go to the superintendent's office and look over a few records. Instead, he visited personally every department, asked questions of every department head, asked questions of everyone in authority anywhere, asked questions of patients, and he didn't go away until he had seen everyone and everything. No detail was too small to escape him.

The Governor's Welfare Program.

"Besides all these things, he has evolved the finest welfare program the state has ever had. I speak from my personal knowledge in this matter, for I have been active in social service work for many years.
"His welfare program was not based simply on sentimentality, but on practical results. It doesn't mean that when somebody said they represented an organization with twenty thousand votes and wanted this or that thing that he gave it to them. It means that when somebody asked for something and got it, they had proved their case.

"The establishment of children's courts in each county has been a big advance in the welfare work of the state. Many of the large cities had had such courts and had a chance to study how they worked. I hope eventually to see women as judges in some of these courts, if not in most of them, but we should not be in any hurry about this matter and only should take them when they are properly prepared for the work. These courts established on a maternity basis would mean many of the young children away from a career of crime. In Westchester county there is a wise, common sense and practical woman running for the office of judge of the children's court, but in every county we must first take time to find the right kind of woman before we ask to have woman elected as judges of these courts.

"Provision has been made for the blind, the deaf and dumb and crippled children. Although the state had provided schools for such children, they could not enter until they became twelve years old unless they were paupers but now they are admitted at the age of five years and so their plastic childhood is made use of with the result that the state reverts to the community the same children better developed than they possibly could be under the old system.

"Congressman Ward has spoken of the maternity bill passed by Congress and the effort to have the federal government cooperate with state governments. There are many states that can't take up this work without federal aid, but with the aid of Governor Miller New York state has placed herself in the foremost rank of all states in this respect.

Miss Rhodes discussed the maternity bill at length, and concluded with a high tribute to the sincere help rendered by Governor Miller to the women of the state in their efforts to secure better government and greater benefits to the poor.

Miller, Practical Humanitarian.

Colonel William J. Donovan, Republican, nominee for lieutenant governor, was given an ovation when he was introduced by Chairman Elting, and measured fully up to the expectations of the audience who found him an easy and pleasing speaker whose reserve of forcefulness is drawn on only for emphasis. He is the United States Attorney for the Western district of New York.

Colonel Donovan said in part:
"We are here tonight as American citizens to determine so far as each one of us can, what kind of state administration we are going to have for the next two years. I am sure Miss Rhodes has made clear the economic program which Governor Miller has been carrying out.

"The Democratic party knows it cannot successfully attack Governor Miller's constructive executive program, and so they try to make an adding machine out of him, but Miss Rhodes has made it clear that kind of humanitarian which is hardest to find—a practical humanitarian. When he takes the platform, the band does not strike up 'The Sidewalks of New York' but all thinking men and women in his audience begin to use their thinking power.

"Governor Miller has had to fight his way to the front, just as every other American citizen has who leads in any line of work. He is of humble family. He was born in Cortland county and he had a mother who wanted to see him get as good an education as was possible for any boy in that county to have. He had what schooling he could get there and he used it to good advantage. But he was not satisfied with that, and he studied more. He knew he must work for his education, and he became a teacher. He saved his money and that enabled him to begin the study of law. At thirty he was one of the best lawyers in Cortland county.

"He took advantage of the opportunity to study American ways, to learn the reason for things, and the knowledge and experience he had gained as a teacher and a lawyer he put to practical application. Naturally desirous of living up to the highest ideals of American citizenship, he took part in politics. Then he was elected to the bench, and his opinions as a judge in that high office show a breadth of view and humanitarianism that are seldom equalled.

Miller Worked, Not Waited.

"When Governor Miller ran for the office of governor two years ago, his opponent Mr. Smith, who was then governor, said that while certain changes were needed for betterment of state service, he could not have the proper changes and revamping of the government made without a constitutional amendment which would take three years. Governor Miller said it was not necessary to wait three years and that he could get the improvements through. People laughed at him. So when he was elected he started out with his board of estimate and control and said, 'We will first agree on certain principles and then we will adhere to them.' The legislature agreed, and the legislature has adhered. So has the governor.

The Test Of Leadership.

"Mr. Smith now says he couldn't put through his reforms while he was governor because the legislature wouldn't play with him. Well, the legislature worked harmoniously with Governor Miller, and we are going to have the same kind of legislature for the next two years while Governor Miller remains in Albany. (Applause.) One of the characteristics of great leadership is the ability to cooperate, and Governor Miller has demonstrated that ability. One of the important changes made by the governor was the standardization of purchases; another was the standardization of employees, so that the opportunity to advance and not be lost in the lodge-podge of office. As a result of thus putting the state on a business basis, the cost of government has been reduced and so have taxes.

Why Smith Was Expensive.

"Mr. Smith studies the figures of the saving which Governor Miller has made, and then says there is something greater than mere money. To Tammany Hall the matter of a few millions may not matter, but it does to the taxpayers. If a matter of a few millions doesn't matter to Mr. Smith, then we can understand his extravagant administration. He says he and Governor Miller are at opposite ends of the pole; that Governor Miller believes in property rights while he believes in the greatest good to the greatest number. Now, after all, isn't the man who manages to save a few hundred dollars entitled to protection against hungry bodies ready to take it from him for their own political benefit? And there are millions of such men in New York state, so when Governor Miller believes in protecting the property rights of these men against excessive taxation, isn't he demonstrating instead of simply saying that he believes in the greatest good to the greatest number?

Will Smith Ignore Constitution?

"The Democrats have put the same kind of stuff in their platform about the wet and dry question. It doesn't matter what you and I may think personally about this matter, the only decent thing that a state officer or any other officer can do is to see that laws which apply to this state are enforced by proper state enactment. Governor Miller has said that as long as laws are on the statute books, no matter what he may think of them personally, he must be true to his oath of office and to the best of his ability see that they are enforced.

"What is Mr. Smith going to do about it? While he was governor he had a law enacted which he knew was contrary to the constitution, and the court promptly declared it unconstitutional. Will he try to have that same law re-enacted so that the court must again declare it unconstitutional?
"That is the same kind of stuff the Democrats have put in their platform about taxation, too. It is all 'bunk.' It isn't business, it isn't honest to the people.

Why Lunn Opposes Miller.

"Now Mr. Lunn, who is a dry traveling on a wet platform, is going through the state crying out against what he calls 'Millerism.' He says it should be eliminated from public life. I can understand why Lunn, with his long record of Socialistic activity and Socialistic doctrines, should be opposed to Governor Miller, who has always shown himself opposed to Socialism. That being the fact, we should be glad to have a man like Governor Miller in the executive chair.

"If government is going to be raised to its proper dignity and capacity, it must depend on the individuals entrusted with carrying on the work of government. If Governor Miller had done nothing else during his entire term, he has set an example to the people of the state of what a public official should be, and with such an example before us, it is to us to step in and do our part toward making government better.

It's 'The Man Behind.'

"You can't have government by machine. It isn't the law that counts nearly as much as it is the man behind the law. The one on trial in campaign is not Governor Miller, but it is the people of the state. Do they want the kind of government which Governor Miller abolished—the kind of government that mounts steadily in cost without giving an adequate return for the money spent in maintaining it? Or do they want the kind of government which has been described to you tonight, which you have seen in practical operation during the past two years, which decreases in cost but increases in efficiency and which above all means the guaranteeing of justice to all of the people of the state?

"By your votes you will answer, each for yourself, which kind of government you prefer." (Applause.)

Wadsworth Names the Hero.

In introducing Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Chairman Elting said that he was not a stranger to Ulster county. Two years ago when he was a candidate for senator, the Ulster county committee had met him at the Delaware county line, and from that time until it left him at the Orange county line, he had made a speech in every village and hamlet between Fine Hill and Marlborough, and at that time he had done nothing else but such a strenuous campaigning trip the senator would ever again set foot in Ulster county.

Senator Wadsworth, in beginning his speech, said he remembered that trip very well, but he had never regretted it, but he had traveled nearly as fast to reach this meeting. Having missed one train at Rochester, he had followed on the next train, reaching Albany at a late hour, where he had been met by Secretary Eckert with an automobile. When Mr. Eckert had told him his plan of reaching Kingston and the time it would require, he had considered him a hero to undertake such a trip in such a time, but after reaching Kingston he and Mr. Eckert had agreed that the real hero of the day was the man who drove the car. He was indeed thankful that he was again in Ulster county.

"The man who winds up a meeting," said Senator Wadsworth, "is usually allowed to ramble along in his talk, but in spite of that fact I shall try to be brief. Although you may think it a hardship for a member of the United States Senate to be brief and not to ramble. (Laughter.)

"I have no doubt that Congressman Ward has told you of some of the accounts at Washington as we found them when the Republican party took over the administration of national affairs on March 4, 1921. That is, he has told you of such accounts as we were able to find, and he has told you of what we have done to curtail the extravagance we found existing. Let me indulge in a talk on several questions of taxation. If there is one subject that ordinarily is not conducive to oratory, it is taxation, but the longer I live, the more I am convinced that the dollars and cents side of government comes closer to every man and woman than anything else, and they want information about it.

All People Pay Taxes.

"Ever since men have attempted to govern themselves, there have been some people who either were in office or trying to get in who have insisted that it was possible to put all the taxation necessary to pay the cost of government on a few individuals. That is still the promise of the demagogue, but when any and every such plan is tried to be put in operation, it works out in this way: that the tax is paid by everybody. It is paid in higher rents, in higher costs of clothing, shoes, foodstuffs, machinery and everything else, and if taxation becomes overburdensome, it results in unemployment.

When Government Commits Crime.

"I hold that there is no greater crime which a government can commit against the people who create the government than to overtax the people. A great many revolutions have had their beginnings in a tax question. There was the American Revolution, which began with the Boston Tea Party, which was the result of nothing except an attempt on the part of the government of Great Britain to tax the American colonists unjustly—to overtax them. It was the dollars and cents side. The French Revolution had its origin in the action of the Bourbon dynasty so overtaxing the people of France that they could not live decently. While the Bourbons spent recklessly the millions of taxes unjustly wrung from the people, it was impossible for the working people of France to live in anything except rags.

"And any attempt to overtax the working people must result in unrest of the most serious kind, and when I say working people I do not mean any particular class but I mean that overwhelming majority of people in all lands who earn their living. When you take money from the people for the expenses of government you take it from the people who are earning it by the sweat of their brow—from the men and women who work.

"When government takes away an overdue proportion of the earnings of a man or woman it is in effect crushing the people down, and discontent is sure to start among them. They know their enterprises are cramped, they see their expenses going higher, they see unemployment increasing. When you see these conditions existing, go deeper and you will see that government is taking too much money from the people.

Wadsworth's Tribute to Woman.

"In spite of my reputation, I am going to say something particularly in praise of women. (Laughter.) Now this may not sound like praise, but it is praise when I say that women spend four-fifths of the money that is earned by man. (Laughter and applause.)
"Isn't it true? It is the woman who does the marketing for the family. She buys the food for the household, she buys the clothing and shoes, and it doesn't all go for herself—it goes for the children and the husband; she handles the money.
"Woman is the business manager of a big business undertaking, and when she goes to market, and counters rising prices she is the first person in the household to be brought face to face with the result of government finance. That is a fair statement of the great function woman performs in this big practical world, and woman must realize before anyone else that when government wastes the money of man, it makes it harder for her and her family to make a decent appearance. (Applause.)

Government Extravagance.

"Two years ago, when we took office at Washington, the government although the war was two years behind us, was spending money at the rate of five billion, three hundred million a year—almost twice as much as it cost the federal government to fight the Civil War for four years, and five times as much as government cost when President Taft was president. We were met by an immense deficit which could not be met except by added taxation. Meanwhile there was burdensome taxation everywhere. If you shipped anything by freight, by express or by parcel post, you paid a tax, and if you rode on a railroad train, or bought candy or went to the theater, or bought shoes, you were taxed.

"Discontent was rife. Business was halted. Unemployment was increasing. Men found prices going up but business going down. Some people imagine that any administration by a wave of a magic wand can change conditions overnight. It can't be done. To bring about a change from such conditions means strict application of the immutable principles of economy.

"What is the way to pay a war debt as to give a note, and then everything is all right. Some people think the way out is to print money by the ton. I had with me today, but lost it on the way here, a piece of paper covered with printed words of a foreign language, but among them were figures which stood out plainly. They were the figures '100,000,000' and it was a 100,000,000 ruble bill of the Russian government, worth in our money just $1.25. Why, in Russia today, if you want to hire a taxicab to take you anywhere, you have to hire another taxi to carry the money you need to pay for the first taxi.

What Republican Party Did.

"I believe one of the greatest benefits our party has rendered has been to resist the false remedies that have been suggested. They have been tried, are being tried, in the countries of Europe, and we know the result. Pay day must always come unless we repudiate debts as between ourselves or as between government and ourselves.

"When we entered in the administration of national affairs two years ago, two years had gone by since the war ended, but there were 700,000 government employees outside of the army and navy employees. We had to dismise thousands and thousands of them, for it has been well said that 'Few die and none resign.' (Laughter and applause.)

"Then we found there was no way of striking a balance on the government books. There never had been anything like a business method of spending money, the only idea had been to spend it, and how some people love to do it! It is so easy, with other people's money! Many a department chief yearns to enlarge the scope of his work. That magical word, 'scope,' makes $100 grow in an appropriation bill where only one dollar grew before. When it is proposed to curtail expense, it will be found that the particular department affected has a mailing list covering the entire country, and when the button is pressed announcing that it is proposed to curtail expense, in three days I am getting, and so is every other Senator, four hundred telegrams from all over this country. That is why a bureaucracy never lives within its income.

"The only way to cure this evil was to pass a budget bill. We have been in office one year under the budget system, a system just the same as any big business firm or corporation normally maintains. Within that one year appropriations decreased $1,500,000,000, and not one legitimate agency of the government was injured. We used to talk about millions in Washington, but now such an amount is a mere bagatelle. We only talk billions now, yet nobody understands more than the millions, and few understand them. It's a big job to revise a tax law. You strike all kinds of ideas, some of them very novel. But we tried out the transportation taxes, and we reduced income taxes as they affected men of small income; we lifted eight hundred million dollars in taxes from the people—eight dollars for every man, woman and child in the country.

Sure Barometer of Confidence.

"I want to point to a certain barometer which I regard as quite accurate. When big corporations want to enlarge its business, it issues securities, usually at par. If the investing public gets the idea that affairs of the corporation are badly managed, that the directors are indulging in wildcat schemes, the value of the securities goes down and instead of selling for one hundred cents on the dollar they sell for 90 or even 80 cents. But if the officers of the corporation are careful and it is apparent that affairs are well managed, the security goes up in value above par—to 110 or 120 cents on the dollar.

"The same thing is true of the Federal government which was erected to be the servant of the people and not their master. Government bonds were put out at par. When we went in office March 4, 1921, confidence of the investing public had become impaired and the price of Liberty bonds went down to 86, which showed that an investing public of twenty million people had lost confidence in the wildcat schemes of the government.

"Since then a change has come over the people: taxes and expenses have been reduced, they see we are not going to send soldiers to Asia Minor and confidence has returned until government securities have risen in value from 86 to above par. (Applause.) That speaks of the confidence of the people.

Our Own Good Fortune.

"While that was going on, there was not a nation on earth that was not having trouble infinitely worse than ours. The average taxes of Great Britain are three times greater; the currency of France and Italy and every other country is at a discount. I know that elections have not worked out happily in every respect, but we have worked out problems and restored confidence. Things have happened, like strikes, to make the work more difficult, but if we look at ourselves critically we must think ourselves lucky, and realize that the government has been doing a wise thing in restoring public confidence.

Vote for Republican Congress.

"So it is with great confidence that I come here to speak for the record our Congress has made; to speak for my colleague Senator Calder who has worked like a slave, who has had an immense strain put on him under trying conditions but always has remained true to his obligation.

"And I am proud to be in Ulster and this congressional district, to remind you that your friend, Charley Ward, has also been doing his duty. (Applause.) It is a good thing to have a business man sitting near the wheels of government. His influence at all times has been for sound housecleaning and he has been opposed to wildcat schemes, and always has been a man of his convictions. (Applause.)

The State Ticket.

"Now a word about the state government. I was in the legislature six years, and that unfortunate body was never able to adjourn until May. But this year the legislature adjourned in March. That meant good team work between the legislature and the governor. You can't accomplish things without team work. Your half-back and your quarter-back and all the others must play together.

"I am proud to be on this platform with out candidate for lieutenant governor. If he were not here I would refer to him as 'Colonel,' but he will not let me talk about his military record. Before he was a colonel he was a lawyer, working hard to do something for the people. He was not looking for anything but simply was an active apostle of readiness. It was that principle that made him a great soldier and a great lawyer. He is United States Attorney now and his district ranks third in the United States. He is going to bring something of value to this state.

"As lieutenant governor his duty is not only to preside over the senate. He is president of the canal board, whose importance you recognize particularly at this time; president of the land board, having supervision of all state riparian rights; president of the State Fair, one of the greatest educational institutions we have, and one of three trustees of public buildings. I, for one, rejoice that he is on the Republican ticket because I know he is ready to serve.

"Political parties have no right to nominate a candidate for office unless he is ready to serve. There is one word that should be emblazoned on the banner of every political party. That word is 'service.' I know that the Republican party always has had it emblazoned on our banner, and I am sure you will be ready to show by your votes that you believe it is service of the right kind that should be continued." (Applause.)

Miss Thelma Harrell, of Savannah, Ga., at seventeen, has passed the state bar examination and is qualified to practice law in that state. She graduated from Savannah High School when she was sixteen and had been pursuing a night course in law. Her ranking in the state examination was the highest ever taken by a woman, and Judge Peter Meldren admitted her to the bar.

Rio Grande Mystery Cross.

One of the most interesting landmarks in all the southwest is La Cruz, or the Cross Hill, about four miles east of Rio Grande City, Texas, on the Brownsville road. A white cross stands at the peak of a white chalk hill. There is no description of any kind. Numerous tales are told regarding La Cruz. One is that in the early days one of the Franciscan monks, while traveling through this wilderness, became lost and climbed to this spot hoping to find himself, but that he finally died of starvation, and his body later was buried there, and the cross erected to mark his resting place. Another tale concerns a flood from the Rio Grande. As the waters were rapidly approaching a man rode through the country warning those who lived in the bottoms, and everyone was saved except this man, and that though his body was never recovered, this monument was built in memory of his heroic death.

"Corduroy" Comes From the French.

A bit of the story of the French Huguenots lies concealed in the word "corduroy." The word is evidently derived from the French "Corde de rot"—the king's cord. Just how this particular kind of cloth came to be called the "king's cord" does not appear in the record. But its French origin is undoubtedly. The textile industry was originally in the hands of the French Huguenots—in Europe, that is to say; for that industry was highly developed in China and India when Europe was turning out small supplies for home consumption. It is probably to the Huguenot pioneers of the industrialization of textiles that we owe the word "corduroy," probably coined as a subtle compliment to a reigning king.

Women in Business Life.

Everything leads us to believe that society cannot expect to benefit from the genius and ability of women as a sex until it gives its girls as well as its boys, its women as well as its men, the same opportunities and the same incentive to achieve distinction, and until all women of genius and talent, all women scholars and women teachers, and all women of every profession and every occupation, are permitted by public opinion and social sanction to marry and go on with their job, instead of being found fault with, threatened and, in many cases, actually deprived of their bread and butter for doing so.—President M. Carey Thomas.

Some Business Man!

While only disliked castor oil milled, but he had caught on to the fact that his dislike had a pecuniary value. The last time he had taken it his mother had given him 10 cents. This particular afternoon he had made an extra fuss and was the proud possessor of a dime and a nickel. With great pride he had offered to "blow the bunch." AWFUL was his consternation when the four boys gathered around the counter. The candy cost a quarter! He grew crimson in the face. Then the idea came "Wait here, fellows!" he whispered. "I'll go home and take another dose!"

NEWBURGH LEADS VALLEY ELEVEN

In Games Thus Far With Poughkeepsie Following. Ahead of Kingston—Locals Need A Win Saturday To Stay In Race.

The results of last week's games in the Central Hudson valley seem to leave Newburgh at the top of the ladder. Poughkeepsie in second place and Kingston in third place.

Newburgh by its impressive victory over the strong Port Jervis team looms up as the most powerful contender for championship honors.

Poughkeepsie by its more or less decisive victory over the heavy Kingston team now stands out as Newburgh's nearest rival.

Of course, with the exception of Poughkeepsie and Kingston, this dope is all arrived at by comparative scores and it all may be shattered before another week rolls around.

The local football team has been a great disappointment to local footballers of the fall sport because of its very poor showing against Poughkeepsie last week.

With one of the heaviest teams the school has had in the past few years every one expected a winning team and the result of the games thus far has puzzled every one.

The weakest spot on the team is still the line which, with the exception of the third quarter in the Poughkeepsie game, has not shown any marked improvement from week to week.

There was some excuse for this for the first week or so because a good many of the men were green but now it is about time they got over their greenness or they never will.

Unless the backfield men and the ends perfect some kind of a defense to use against the forward passing game of their opponents they are going to lose some more games and above all they are going to be trampled by Newburgh on Saturday.

Newburgh has one of the best quarterbacks along the Hudson Valley this year in the personage of Taylor who is particularly adept at throwing forward passes.

Bellinger, one of the backfield men, is good at catching these forward and expediting fast after he has caught them so that the local team by all means should work out some method of thwarting this attack which will no doubt be used by their opponents on Saturday.

Kingston must win the game on Saturday if they expect to stay in the race for the valley honors as a defeat then will mean that they will have to beat both Poughkeepsie and Newburgh when they meet them for the second time and Poughkeepsie will have to beat Newburgh and Newburgh will have to beat Poughkeepsie to get even a look in as this would establish a triple tie.

JOS. PFROMMER BEGINS DEFENSE

Details of Transfer of Her Share of Property by His Wife Described And His Suspicion of Her Faithfulness.

The defense in the Pfommer suit in the supreme court to set aside a deed begun shortly before noon, Miss Dora Schuster being the first witness. She is employed in the building in which Mr. Flanagan's office is located and was the person to whom Mrs. Pfommer deeded the property and who immediately thereafter deeded it to Pfommer. This is a legal technicality, a deed from wife to husband being invalid. Witness said she heard Mrs. Pfommer say she was willing to sign the deed.

Miss Ida Lipkin, stenographer for Mr. Flanagan, testified to the executing of the deeds and that Mr. and Mrs. Pfommer were there the day before. She heard no conversation.

Chris J. Flanagan, in whose office the deeds were drawn and executed, testified that he had been consulted by Pfommer in reference to an automobile case, and on May 5 Mr. and Mrs. Pfommer came to his office and told him the trouble was that Pfommer suspected certain things regarding her and Marshall and she had told him certain things—that they had attended movies together and that she had spent the time between trains with Marshall. She admitted these were sufficient reasons for Pfommer to become angry and she wanted to convince him that there was nothing worse by deeding the property to him. The following day the deeds were drawn and executed. Several days later Mrs. Pfommer telephoned, asking where Pfommer was, as he had gone away and she did not know where he was. She asked if Pfommer had discharged his detectives. Witness said he knew nothing of any detectives. Several days later she called in person and asked about detectives.

Cross-examined, witness said all the consideration Mrs. Pfommer received was the friendship of her husband. She had denied, point blank, any criminal relations with Marshall or anyone else.

Joseph F. Pfommer, the defendant, testified to the purchase of the property in 1910 for $3,175, paying down $500 given by his mother and another $500 from Mrs. Pfommer's mother. A mortgage was given for the remainder. The mortgage was later paid by witness.

March 16, 1922, Mrs. Pfommer, who had been away on a visit, telephoned that she had just come in on the evening train and asked him to come and get her. They kissed and went to a lunch room and from there home. March 23, early in the evening, Mrs. Pfommer went in the office to telephone and closed the door. Had never noticed her close the door before. After telephoning she went out. She had said she was going to the movies with "Jerry," a woman friend.

Witness went out and uptown to St. James street on a trolley car. Walking on St. James street he saw his wife and "Jerry" walking and followed them to Maiden Lane and Albany avenue, where they stopped and talked to someone in a Dodge car. They then walked out Albany avenue to a dark spot near Garbarino's store. The automobile came there. Witnesses went there, Richard Marshall was in the automobile. Witness said "This is the wrong direction to go to a moving picture show." Mrs. Pfommer said she had called Marshall. Marshall said she should not take all of the blame. The automobile left. "Jerry" and Mrs. Pfommer left.

Witness went home and got his automobile and went uptown and saw "Jerry's" husband on John street and told what he had seen. They waited outside the theatre and saw Mrs. Pfommer come out talking to Marshall. He then went home. Mrs. Pfommer was there. They "had words" and he said he was going away. She cried and tried to hold him back. He returned shortly and heard his wife telephoning. He heard her say "I have not admitted anything and I have not told anything." She admitted she was talking to Richard Marshall. This was about midnight. Witness went to see Marshall at the Hotel Uster and had a talk with him. He had no conversation with Marshall since.

About this time Mrs. Pfommer told witness she had missed a train out of New York, giving details of why and how she had passed the time reading in the waiting room. He later learned she had not arrived on the late train she said she had come on. Her sister in Jamaica delivered to him certain letters.
